Year 6 SATs results for 2017

The National Curriculum was changed in September 2014, followed by a completely new method of assessing pupils' attainment and progress in May 2016. The system of levels no longer exists and instead, pupils are expected to attain a National Standard.

Reading and Maths are assessed by means of a test, which is externally marked. Writing is assessed within school by teachers against a framework, based on the performance of the pupil over time in a variety of contexts. Science is also assessed by teachers. Alongside the test results, teachers are required to submit their own assessment to the DfE in Reading and Maths.

The table below shows the percentage of pupils that attained the National Standard and those who were assessed as working significantly higher than National Standard, as well as our average progress score and average scaled scores.

90 pupils	School (Pupils attaining National Standard)	National (Pupils attaining National Standard)	Average progress (National measure is 0)	School Average scaled score	National Average scaled score
